QUICK START GUIDE

The 5-Minute Overview

Here's what you need to know to get started immediately:

Step 1: Understand What Lenders Need

Lenders typically require 8 categories of documents:

- Business Identity (proves your business exists)
- Financial Statements (shows your numbers)
- Bank Documentation (proves legitimate banking)
- Debt Records (shows existing obligations)
- Revenue Verification (proves you make money)
- Collateral Documents (shows assets)
- Personal Financials (for personal guarantees)
- Business Plan (shows you have a strategy)

Step 2: Set Up Your Organization System

Create two parallel systems:

- Physical: A filing cabinet with labeled folders
- Digital: A folder structure on your computer mirroring the physical system

Both systems use the same 12-folder structure (detailed in Folder Organization Guide).

Step 3: Complete Your Templates

Fill out each template in this kit:

1. Funding Document Checklist - Track your progress
2. Bank Statement Prep Sheet - Organize your statements
3. Business Summary Template - Create your one-page overview
4. Use of Funds Worksheet - Define your funding goals
5. Revenue Snapshot Sheet - Present your financial history
6. Debt Overview Worksheet - Document what you owe

- 7. Folder Organization Guide - Set up your system
- 8. Application Readiness Checklist - Verify everything before submission

Step 4: Maintain Your System

Update your documents quarterly so they're always current. When a funding opportunity arises, you can assemble your package in minutes, not hours.

SECTION 2: BANK STATEMENT PREP SHEET

How to Organize and Present Your Business Bank Statements

Understanding What Lenders Look For

Primary Factors Lenders Evaluate:

Average Daily Balance: Lenders calculate your average balance over the statement period. Higher average balances suggest financial stability and the ability to cover loan payments. They typically want to see at least 2-3 months of average balances that would cover your proposed monthly payment.

Cash Flow Patterns: They look for consistency in deposits. A business with highly variable deposits may be considered higher risk. Regular, predictable deposits from customers suggest stable revenue.

Expense Management: Lenders notice large or unusual withdrawals. They want to see that you're managing expenses responsibly and not living beyond your means.

Overdraft History: Frequent overdrafts signal poor cash management and raise red flags for lenders.

Step-by-Step Preparation Process

Step 1: Gather Your Statements

Collect the last 12 months of business bank statements. If applying for a smaller loan, 6 months may suffice, but 12 months provides the most comprehensive picture.

Where to get them:

- Download from your online banking portal
- Request official copies from your bank branch
- Access through your bank's mobile app
- Use your bank's customer service line

Format considerations:

- PDF format is preferred for digital applications
- Official bank copies with the bank's logo and letterhead are best
- Avoid screenshots lenders want authentic documentation

Step 2: Review Each Statement

Before presenting your statements, review them critically. Look for:

Deposits to highlight:

- Regular customer payments
- Recurring revenue streams
- Large contracts or one-time payments

Items to explain:

- Large irregular withdrawals
- Transfers to personal accounts

- Large payments to vendors
- Any deposits that might look unusual

Create a brief note for each statement explaining any items that might raise questions. Transparency builds trust.

Step 3: Organize by Date Range

Structure your statement package chronologically, most recent first. Each statement should be complete and include all pages.

Step 4: Create a Summary Page

Add a one-page summary that lenders can review quickly:

- Bank name and account number (last 4 digits only)
- Account type (checking, savings, money market)
- Average monthly balance
- Highest balance in the period
- Lowest balance in the period

Step 5: Highlight Positive Patterns

When your bank statements show healthy patterns, make them obvious. Create a separate highlights page that calls attention to:

- Growing balances over time
 - Stable revenue patterns
 - Cash reserves above operating expenses

Mistake 2: Missing pages

Bank statements often span multiple pages. Ensure every page is included.

Mistake 3: Inconsistent business names

Your legal name, DBA, and bank account name must align or be explained.

Mistake 4: Forgetting personal guarantees

If you personally guarantee the loan, include your personal financial documents.

Mistake 5: Unclear use of funds

"Lump sum" and "working capital" are vague. Be specific about exactly what the money will accomplish.
